LONDON, Sept. 23.—Czech legation spokesman said an order for a general mobilization throughout Czechoslovakia was broadcast tonight over the Czech radio network. The order was said to have called up all officers, non-commissioned officers and men under 40 years of age immediately. It was understood the men would be enrolled during the night so that Czechoslovakia would be fully mobilized by dawn.

Premier Daladier Stiffens As Litvinoff Gives Hint Of Help

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Reuters News Agency reported tonight from Godesberg that Prime Minister Chamberlain had broken off his talks with Chancellor Hitler because Germany refused to give the guarantees and assurances demanded by Great Britain. Reuters added that while it had been officially stated the Prime Minister would return to London tomorrow, it was believed Mr. Chamberlain would make a final effort toward an agreement in his farewell meeting with the Führer tonight.

Announcement Follows Surprise 20-Minute Conversation Between British Envoy and Foreign Minister Bonnet own party, was one of those who quoted those words to newspapermen after a delegation of Radical-Socialists had called on the premier.

Malvy also said Daladier declared he would call parliament immediately back into session "if the situation should become worse."

France is pledged to go to Czechoslovakia's aid should the latter be victim of unprovoked aggression. The declarations attributed to the premier were reported by Malvy shortly before 6:30 p.m. yesterday.

Earlier, after the British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, had had a surprise 20-minute conference with Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet,

The ambassador went to the foreign office and presented his report to the Foreign Minister. Between Prime Minister Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler were held negotiations late tonight and return to London by plane early tomorrow morning.

Sir Horace Wilson, Mr. Chamberlain's closest adviser, made the announcement in the Foreign Office.

It was agreed that the Radical-Socialist deputies said Daladier, the leader of their party, declared general mobilization might be effected without calling parliament.

The statement attributed to Daladier could mean that, following his previous stand, would now make war on Germany if German troops crossed the Czechoslovak frontier.

At Toulon, near the German frontier, it was reported sections of army engineers had been sent right to the frontier to reinforce the commitments of mobile guards destined to be struck troops in event of conflict.

The order was to be applied to troops in the interior if the situation became alarming.

LEGION OFFERS FULL RESOURCES TO BACK CANADA

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Yester evening the Canadian Legion of the organization's entire resources, in present crisis, were offered to the Canadian government. Prime Minister MacKenzie King to Col. W. W. Foster, Dominion president of the Legion, made public at National Headquarters of the Association today.

The offer was first conveyed to the government in a letter by Col. Foster, Executive Council, at its recent meeting in Ottawa. In a later wire Col. Foster telegraphed

"In view of the situation today, may I on behalf of the Canadian Legion offer to the Canadian government all the assistance made to your cabinet by the Legion Council recently, and now add that the Canadian Legion stands ready to assist the country's defense in the present crisis."

The Prime Minister replied: "I thank you for your telegram just received. Its assurances will be appreciated not least by the citizens of Canada as a whole that my best are by my colleagues and myself."

The Forgotten League

Mr. De Valera must be wondering whether the delegates meant it as a joke, or just couldn't get anybody else to take the job, when they elected him President of the League of Nations. While the fate of Europe has been in jeopardy such as it has not faced since close of the Great War, the name of that organization has scarcely been mentioned in the official statements or news dispatches. It was never at any stage in the dickering been taken into consideration as a body to which the issue might be referred for settlement. That it had any standing in the matter, any interest in the outcome, or any possible usefulness as an agency for maintaining peace with justice, there has not been the slightest recognition.

For practical purposes and so far as Europe is concerned, the League is dead. That is no reflection upon the men who created it or the conception upon which it is based. The reflection is upon dictators who plotted to destroy it, and, still more, the dupes who allowed them to do so. The latter should be able to see by this time the folly they committed when they failed to stand together to maintain the only bulwark they had against the fate that is now overtaking the little countries one after another.

A Two-Man Deal

A fact not to be overlooked is that the cession of the Sudeten are to Germany was not imposed upon Czechoslovakia by the parliaments of France and Great Britain, nor in response to any sort of expressed demand from the peoples of these countries. It was done by Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain, with the presumed sanction of their cabinets, but with no opportunity given to their parliaments to register approval or disapproval, and no means taken to find out what the public of either country thought about the scheme.

Responsibility, whatever it may be assigned to, rests upon those two men absolutely, along with whatever credit or blame is involved. M. Daladier undertook on his own account to notify France's undertaking to Prague, and Mr. Chamberlain to nullify the contingent obligation of Britain to defend France in making good that undertaking. Neither called his parliament together, offering as justification for summary action that Hitler wouldn't wait—which was no doubt true.

While the action taken is for convenience sake spoken of as being taken by France and Britain, that expression is not literally true. It was taken on the heads of their respective Governments, of their own motion and without parliamentary sanction. What the parliaments and the peoples of the two countries think of the deal will be known later. For the time it is a Daladier-Chamberlain deal purely and simply.

From Berchtesgaden To Godesberg

Mr. Chamberlain's second flight to Germany differs from the first in one respect. He went to Berchtesgaden, everyone supposed, to "tell Hitler". But he went to Godesberg yesterday to be told. There was no other direction the interview could take, for in the interval the whole position of things has changed. The time for laying down terms on which the Fuehrer would be appeased by giving him the Sudeten area has gone. He has the area now; and it is garrisoned by armed Sudeten and his own selected Brown Shirts.

The question now is not what Hitler will concede, but whether he will concede anything, and whether he has fresh demands to present. Talk of a "quid pro quo" would have been in order before the Czechs surrendered. It is now too late to demand a price for the concession already made. If the victorious Fuehrer consents to half his "march to the east" that will be done of his own accord—and against both his declared program and the logic of the Alsted report.

The fact is that all hands are up for Hitler. Some in salutation; the others in submission. He is the arbiter of peace and war. He doesn't have to listen to them; he can dictate them. Mr. Chamberlain can only have gone yesterday as a sumner for peace, in the name of Britain and France, and on behalf of Europe. Having delivered the goods, the associated Premiers can now only try to collect—from the possessor who doesn't have to pay.

In language that is brutally direct, Mr. Winston Churchill has stated the position as it now is: "Acceptance of Hitler's terms involved prostration of Europe before Nazi power, of which the fullest advantage will certainly be taken." Mr. Chamberlain is engaged in the forlorn hope of pleading with the triumphant Nazi chief to refrain from using the power he has gained and to forego the opportunity for further conquests that has been opened to him. From Berchtesgaden to Godesberg is a long way.

The Crop That Pays

The farmer at Tilley who threshed 69 bushels of wheat to the acre from irrigated land has not been allowed to hold the provincial record very long. A Baffin Accord farmer reports having threshed 75 bushels per acre from a four-acre patch, 51½ bushels per acre from a 30-acre field, and 44 bushels per acre from another field of 60 acres.

These growers are to be congratulated, not merely for having gained distinction because of these remarkable yields, but also because they will have the practical advantage of realizing a profit on the year's operations while farmers whose land gave only light yields may actually lose money and cannot in any case make very much.

It is calculated that the 80 cent pegged price will work out at about $3 cents to the farmer for No. 1 Northern. On this basis the man with a 75 bushel crop stands to collect a gross income of $39.75 per acre, while the one who threshes only 20 bushels to the acre can look for a gross return of only $10.60 per acre. The cost of preparing land and sowing a crop is the same whether the yield be large or small. Harvesting and threshing costs are higher where the crop is heavy, but the added costs are only a fraction of the added revenue.

Whether the price is up or down, it is the big yield per acre that counts, and when the price is down the acre yield may determine whether the grower is better off or worse off for having sown and reaped a crop.

The Alberta average this year has been estimated at around 20 bushels to the acre. This means that while many farmers will secure heavier out-turn, many will get far less than this average. The "moral" of low prices is that the grower adapts his farming methods to the end of getting the largest possible number of bushels per acre is the farmer who is likely to make money. The converse is, of course, that the farmer who does not definitely aim at high acre yields is risking disaster.

People in Florida who early in the week boarded up their windows, turned public buildings into shelters, and built up an emergency relief organization, had all their trouble for nothing. The hurricane they were expecting changed course and struck the New England states, causing nearly 450 deaths and doing property damage running into millions of dollars. The Floridians know their hurricanes, and had good cause to "batten down" when they thought that one was coming their way.

The tolerant French recognize no racial or religious castes of unimportant. Any law-abiding Frenchman who pays his way is accepted as a good citizen, no matter what his social or political or personal religious belief. So it isn't surprising that the eminent French dramatist Philip Bernard Shaw has been a popular dramatist on the Italian stage. In 1923 he was published on the Order of Saint Maurice and Lazarus in recognition of his service to the drama.

In return for his decoration to Mussolini by way of protest, M. Daladier wired II Duce saying:

"I could no longer regard it as an honor to wear this rosette while you are persecuting in the name of racism of recent invention, Italian citizens above me."

It is from a series of reports of races that the force and beauty of a nation derive. The pre-text that the 300,000 inhabitants of Italy are in danger from this tiny minority of 90,000 is ridiculous for a man of Mussolini's mentality.

MENNONITES TO BE EVICTED IN NORTH COUNTRY

Province Will Move 20 Families Following Protest
To Ottawa

Determined to carry out provisions of the Alberta Lands Act and conforming to protests already sent to Ottawa against permanent placement of Mexican citizens into this province, the provincial government has decided to carry out eviction proceedings against 20 Mennonite families who have squatted or settled on provincial lands in the Peace River country.

Mr. Tamer, minister of lands and mines, confirmed the action by the government.

Twenty Mennonite families settled in the Fife, Vermilion area of the Peace River area.

NO ACTION

Mr. Tamer stated that in regard to their families who have settled on lands no action can be taken, but there are 20 families who can be evicted.

These families have not conformed to Lands Act regulations and the attorney-general's department will take necessary eviction proceedings.

The province has no authority to deport the evicted families to Mexico, as the province is not a border or immigration area. It is pointed out that the families are not here to stay, but to work and to explore as to the possibility to move up the lands on which they have squatted.

If they did take up homesites it would be a waste of time to prove them up and they are in no financial position to do so.

PROTEST TO OTTAWA

Mr. Tamer received a protest from the Mennonites regarding the permission to these Mennonite families to come from Mexico as they are reported suffering from malnutrition.

No action was taken on the protest.

The procedure in evicting families is that notice has to be given to the families and then an inspection is made.

W. J. Lampley, M.L.A. for Peace River, has interviewed the families and expressed satisfaction with the handling of the problem.

COURT RESERVES JUDGMENT FOR ACCIDENT CASE

Judgment was reserved in the appeal brought by James L. DeGroot, 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. DeGroot, A. F. Ewing, administrator of DeGroot's supreme court action seeking $15,000 general and special damages from Ed Kramer, Edmonton pressman, for injuries received when a car in which he was riding was struck by an oncoming truck.

The Kramer car had been loaned to DeGroot, but at the time of the accident it was being driven by Hickey's brother, Mr. Justice Ewing found that DeGroot was not at fault in the accident as he had not expressly loaned the car to the third party.

Johnsen and Mr. C. G. Johnson are acting for the appellant, with R. D. T. Gage, K.C. and George Bryan, Stony Plain, for Mr. Kramer.
